RUSSIANS ATTEMPT TO HALT UPRISINGS

Soon & Heard Around MURRAY

The Imperial Type Metal magazine gives the following little story about Robert Ingersoll who answered a critic pretty well.

In the gay nineties many people were shocked by the agnostic lectures of Colonel Robert Ingersoll, once attorney general of Illinois. Yet it was an effective orator with a witty mind and a magnetic personality that won him wide popular support.

A reply he once made to criticism by a dogmatic editor is often quoted as a masterpiece of repartee. The paper had written that Ingersoll's son read cheap novels, lost his mind, and died miserably in an insane asylum.

Ingersoll replied: "My son was not a great novel reader. He did not go insane. He was not sent to an asylum. He did not die. I never had a son."

Then we picked up the following from the N.C. & St. L. Bulletin which usually has home jokes that run true to form.

Willie's Essay on Cats
"Cats that's made are called Mautense cats. Mau-tense cats are known by their quiet purrs and these are called Pussian cats. Cats with very bad tempers is called Angorie cats. Cats with deep feelings is called Feline cats."

An undertaker wired a man: "Shall I bury, embalm, or cremate her?"
The guy wired: "All three — take no chances!"

A Texas farmer was the owner of a good short-horn bull. A stranger who had admired the animal went up to the farmer one day and asked, "What will you take for your bull?"
"Wal, that depends," the farmer said. "Are you a tax-assessor, or has he been killed by a train?"

Aunt Het Begins Today In Ledger

If life's little worries give you the blues, don't rush to a psychiatrist, just try an extra laugh now and then, says Nix Crawford, of the Western Auto Store. Furthermore, since deeds mean more than words, he is providing the laugh in the form of famous "Aunt Het" for Ledger and Times readers.

Robert Quillen's panel "Aunt Het" has long been one of the nation's top features, and still is growing in popularity. The feature reflects humor, warmth, friendliness. Mr. Crawford said that he hopes Ledger and Times readers will enjoy Aunt Het each week.

Quarterly Court Meets On Monday

The Calloway Quarterly Court met yesterday at the court house. Billy Brandon was charged with drunkenness, according to presiding judge Hall Hood and received a fine and costs. He was placed in the county jail on default of the payment.

Kent Harp was fined $10.00 and costs on a charge of reckless driving.

In the Fiscal Court meeting last week the county bought a grader on rubber giving the county two graders with rubber tires. The new grader is one purchased by the Hazel District.

The Fiscal Court also levied the school taxes which is a normal procedure at this time of the year. There was no increase in the school taxes, with the $1.50 tax for general school purposes being the same and the 25 cent tax for the sinking fund being the same as in the past years.

Ten cents of the sinking fund tax would have expired this year, but it was voted by the people of the Murray School District to continue the tax so that a site for a new grade school building could be purchased.

Supplements To New Home

STA. Me. July 7 (UP)—The Pinkham quadruplets, one year old today, will be in the new five-room home which their carpenter father built for the most part single-handed.

The three girls and a boy can see their new home 300 yards away through the windows of the old farmhouse rented by Silas E. Pinkham, 46, and his wife, Elizabeth.

The quads are healthy, handsome and, according to their proud, 36-year old mother, "a joy to care for."

Land for the new home was given by friends. Contributions from the public and various organizations have paid for the materials going into the home.

The Pinkhams were living in a two-room shack when Mrs. Pinkham gave birth to quadruplets at a Portland hospital. The family lived in a rented 180-year old farmhouse through the winter and had to move into a second farmhouse when the owner of the first needed the house.

Women Prisoners Riot, Subdued

JESSUP, Md. July 7 (UP)—About 50 rioting women inmates fought a pitched battle today with club-wielding state police and guards at the Maryland reformatory for women before the screaming prisoners were subdued.

While the inmates cursed and howled, a reinforced detail of 17 state police, armed with pistols and clubs, invaded the cottage on the second try. They hauled out 155 of the women.

State Police reported shortly before noon that the situation was under control.

It was not learned immediately whether any of the women were injured. One state policeman—Lt. Martin M. Puncke—suffered cuts of the face and hands.

Officials said the disturbance began late Monday night, apparently as a protest against disciplinary action against one of the women who had been transferred to the prison from Crownsville state mental hospital.

Prison officials said that when the woman attempted to injure herself, she was decided to move her. The outbreak occurred when officials tried to move her.

Miss Alice Blum superintendent of the prison, attempted to enter the cottage several times, but was driven out. She was not injured.

Sorrow No Stranger To Young Woman

CHICAGO, July 7 (UP)—The young woman who fainted with grief in St. Columbkille Church Monday was no stranger to sorrow.

She was fire heroine Roberta Lee Mason, who received widespread praise for her courage in rescuing a sister and three young brothers from a fire that destroyed their family home in suburban Des Plaines, Ill., on February 17, 1949.

Roberta, who was then 14, suffered crippling, ugly burns over much of her body.

Sympathetic well-wishers read her story and donated $10,128 to a fund which was held in trust until the girl turned 18 last year.

Des Plaines neighbors pitched in to build the burned-out family a six-room "dream house."

But the scars were still there. Then, Roberta's father contracted a chronic ailment and was forced out of work. The girl's mother had to take a job.

Roberta gave $3,000 of her trust fund to her parents, then watched it melt away for medical expenses.

Not long after doctors told Roberta she had a heart ailment. She was forced to quit her job. Then in a happy interlude she married Ernest Hastings last December. They expect a baby in October.

Roberta used all of the money left in trust fund to pay medical expenses and furnish an apartment, giving the "dream house" to her hard-pressed parents.

Last week Roberta's sister, Rosemary, 17, was killed in an automobile accident. The girl was to have been wed next Sunday.

Monday on the way to Rosemary's funeral at St. Columbkille, a car collided with the auto in which Roberta was riding. She was injured and taken to a hospital for emergency treatment.

Doctors released her in time to attend the funeral. When Roberta sat in the church where her sister was to have been married she fainted in the arms of her brother. She was carried from the chapel.

Red Assault Is Broken

SEOUL, Korea July 7 (UP)—Heroic Americans and South Korean soldiers, using World War I tactics, broke a 2,000-man Chinese assault on the western front today with bayonets and rifle bullets.

Ankle-deep mud that turned the front lines near Porkchop Hill and Arrowhead Ridge into a miserable waste land clogged the rifles and machine guns of the northern defenders of the vital Allied outposts.

American footsloggers of the U. S. 7th Division annihilated a 1,500-man pincer assault on Porkchop, and the South Koreans achieved similar successes at Arrowhead.

The onrushing battalions of Chinese stepped over the bodies of Reds who had fallen in the mud and died under the blasts of their own artillery in their vain efforts to take the two outposts guarding the invasion route to Seoul.

Even though 8,500 rounds of artillery and mortar fire supported them, the Reds backedtracked to the northern slopes of both outposts by late afternoon.

Frontline officers estimated the Chinese hurled two battalions against Porkchop during the long battle that lasted all night and all day.

Americans and Chinese spilled blood and forth across the slippery battlefield several times during the day.

It was impossible to tell immediately how many Chinese had been killed or wounded but a 7th Division spokesman said enemy casualties were high.

Ted Williams To Receive Discharge

ATSUGI AIR BASE, Japan, July 7 (UP)—Capt. Ted Williams, whose car trouble grounded him after 33 combat missions in Korea, took off for the United States today for resumption and discharge.

The Boston Red Sox left fielder and power hitter said before leaving he was confident it will not be too difficult to get into shape for the 1954 baseball season.

Williams said, however, he did not expect to receive his discharge from the Marines until October, a month after the end of the 1953 season.

Asked if his tour of duty in Korea had any effect on his ability to play ball, Williams replied: "I didn't put me in shape. I don't think it affected me much either way."

"I don't expect too much difficulty in getting back into baseball," Williams took off in a four-engine Navy transport plane. He said he expected to land at Moffett Field, Calif., in about two days.

Weather

Firing Squads Kept Busy As Many Rioters Are Convicted

By JOSEPH FLEMING
United Press Staff Correspondent
BERLIN, July 7 (UP)—Red firing squads were reported today to have executed 46 East German policemen for participating in the workers' revolt against Communist rule last month.

The West Berlin newspaper Telegraf said that 15 People's Police and 31 enlisted men were convicted of mutiny and "resistance against the Soviet Army," and had been shot.

The report could not be confirmed but Western Allied officials said thousands of police joined the rebellion in East Germany and tens of thousands stood by passively and made no move to suppress the anti-Communist uprising.

The Russians were said to have tightened non-fraternization bans and forbidden all but official contacts between the Soviet occupation forces and East Germans.

East Germans convicted of leading the rebellion were reported facing possible deportation to the Soviet Union.

The Information Bureau West, a private intelligence agency in West Berlin, said Soviet military authorities already have deported German civilians convicted by Red army courts.

Russian military tribunals as well as East German courts were reported busy trying alleged leaders of the revolt which swept the Soviet Zone June 17. Some 300,000 tank-supported Soviet troops were called in and martial law declared to crush the threat to the Communist East German regime.

But a Western spokesman said labor unrest still simmered despite military rule and some concessions offered by the Red government. Strikes tied up a number of factories while workers at other plants maintained slowdowns to obtain the release of fellow workers netted in the roundup of thousands of demonstrators.

The three Western commandants for the third time demanded Moscow guard the Soviet lift their restrictions on free travel between East and West Berlin which they imposed during the uprising.

brova also rejected Russian charges that the revolt was provoked by "Western agents and provocateurs." The Soviet allegations, the note said, are "completely false and contrary to the well-established facts."

The Western commandants said they were "encourage to note certain preposterous restrictions" on traffic had been removed but pointed off that important intersection facilities such as subways and elevated lines still are suspended.

According to the Information Bureau West, the deportation of German civilians to Russia has been going on for some time. The bureau said some 100 Germans a month were being sent to the Soviet Union and all the deportees have been persons convicted by Russian military courts in Red Germany.

The anti-Communist organization, as quoted by the Northwest German Radio at Hamburg, said it deplores the Russian military prison at Potsdam in heavily guarded trucks and are taken to the railway to be loaded aboard freight cars for shipment to Russia.

GHOSTLY-HOOFBEATS

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO
THE MOON was near to setting, and Ruxton strained his eyes. Then he drew to a halt and stood in his stirrups, listening. The hard pound of hoofs came to him, and the excited shouts of men, and now he made out a group of horsemen near the trees. They were on him almost at once; they surrounded him. "Who is it?" a deep voice demanded, and Ruxton recognized the blocky figure of Mack Torgin, who found his own answer. "That stranger, who's been hanging around town."

"The noisy one," someone said. "The one who's been asking questions. Looks like a gambler from the cut of his clothes. Drifted down from Butte, I'll bet. Got a marked deck in his pocket and a sneak-up in his sleeve."

Ruxton thumbed back his wide-brimmed sombrero. "My name is Slade Ruxton," he said and showed them a bold and composed face. Nearly a dozen of them by the quick count he was able to make, and no sign of that icy-eyed one he'd seen from the trees yesterday morning. Against the heat of their anger he must put coolness.

"I'm Torgin of Slade," Torgin said. "You meet anyone heading south, Ruxton? A couple fellers, maybe a girl along with them, maybe not."

Ruxton crooked one leg around his saddlehorn and donned the air of an affable stranger willing to be of any possible service. "I take it you're looking for Cole Manning, Packard Purdy, and Laura Brownlee."

Torgin jerked as though dangled from the end of a string, and suspicion deepened his voice. "Now how would you know that, mister?"

"A lawman!" someone ejaculated, and moonlight glinted on a drawn gun.

Ruxton said quietly, "Put that gun away." He waited till the gun sagged in the fellow's hand, and then he smiled at Torgin. "You've called the wrong turn, friend. You can head back. There's been no body on the trail to town."

Torgin's jaw bunched; his eyes were both skeptical and angry. One he might have made if Burke

"All that tangled country up north!" he said and fell to cursing and dropping his foot to the stirrup and nudged his horse northward, toward that distant coulee where an abandoned dugout stood. Mack Torgin moved up alongside him and they rode straggled out behind.

Strong in Slade Ruxton rose the feeling that at long last he was done with caution. But Torgin had said there'd be no need for him. Ruxton, to face Cole Manning. Maybe a man could yet ride out of this without having his law based on his heels. He hadn't burned all his bridges behind him. There was that last left to safety...

Dr. Luke Brownlee, too, rode northward, but in the early dawn, when the dew stood on the grass and the meadow larks sang bright morning music. This, Brownlee remembered, was the season between snow and summer, though he had to recollect the calendar to be sure. Got so he couldn't tell one day from another to separate the seasons, by jingo, considering how busy the hospital kept him. Man shouldn't wrap himself up so tight in his work that he wandered around in a fog, but babies did get born and people did die and sickness took no holiday.

Nice to be aboard a horse again, though he'd been so long out of saddle that tomorrow he'd likely be stiffer than a plaster cast and a fit candidate for one of his own hospital beds. Man should mind his mare so he didn't get so he overlapped a saddlehorn.

New that made something to mull over. Thirty years ago he'd been a man, a fancy figure on a horse, but he'd used a square-top buggy then and promised himself some Sunday capers he never got. Kept a saddler, too, and it got fat and lady like the stall, while the mare that hauled the buggy did all the work.

Getting old, he guessed. Getting old and dwelling on the past, when it was the future he should be thinking about—the immediate future.

No Adequate Way To Plot Tornadoes

WASHINGTON (UP) - Weather scientists confessed today they still have found no adequate way to predict tornadoes - even with the magic of radar.

A former Navy weather expert in Baltimore, Md., had declared a storm-tracking radar network could have cut life and property losses drastically in the tornadoes that hit the Midwest and New England.

Retired Capt. Howard T. Orville, now a technical consultant for Bendix Aviation Corp., said such a system would be relatively cheap and would rob twisters of their "most dangerous punch" - surprise.

But Dr. Harvey Wexler, chief of scientific services for the U. S. Weather Bureau, said government meteorologists "do not know" if radar could do all Orville claimed. Orville estimated, in a television broadcast, that the electronic eye would cut the loss of life in recent tornadoes by 98 percent and reduce property damage by as much as 10 percent.

Anniversary Tea Is Held At Wells Home By Woman's Society

The lovely home of Mrs. O. C. Wells on South Fifth Street was the scene of the tea held Tuesday afternoon by the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church in observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the Kentucky Woman's Missionary Union.

Mrs. E. C. Parker opened the program by giving the reasons for the tea—observance of this special occasion. The history of the WMS of the First Baptist Church was given by Mrs. George Upchurch while the history of the WMU of the Elbow River Baptist Association was given by Mrs. R. H. Falwell.

Mrs. Hugh McElrath, president of the Regional WMS and one of the vice-presidents of the State WMS, was the guest speaker. She gave a short resume of the state work and told of her attending the anniversary tea at a Lexington church where the WMU was first organized.

Decorations in the anniversary colors were used at vantage points throughout the house. The tea table was overlaid with a pretty cloth and held the cake topped with fifty candles. Punch and cake were served to the fifty members calling during the hours of three and five o'clock. An offering for special work was taken during the afternoon.

Mrs. Mavis Morris presided at the punch bowl. The social committee of the WMS composed of Mrs. Fred Gingles, chairman, Mrs. R. W. Churchill, Mrs. Hugh Wilson, Mrs. Hillard Rogers, Mrs. R. L. ## Women Are Becoming Bigger In Middle, Narrower In Hips

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY

United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—Women are getting bigger in the middle, broader in the shoulders and narrower in the hips, a recent survey reports.

That hour glass silhouette of Lillian Russell's day isn't only out of fashion—it's downright impossible for most of today's healthy, athletic young women. Even those hipless creatures, the fashion models, can't fit into Grandma's corset.

This is due partly to evolution, partly to living habits, according to the researchers for the H. W. Gossard Co., which released the survey. A Harvard professor reported in 1920 that American college women were four pounds heavier, an inch taller and one and one-half inches bigger around the waist than the girls of 1890.

Now this survey comes up with the news that the average measurements today are bust, 35 inches; waist, 29 inches and hips, 38 inches. Shades of the perfect 36!

"Height is increasing about an inch and a half every 50 years, hips are narrowing the shoulders are getting broader," reports the Gossard survey.

The researchers are convinced that women will always have an inward curve at the waistline, if for no other reason than that it appeals to men.

Grandma owed her 18-inch waist and her fainting spells to those whalebone and steel corsets. Nowadays girls want to breathe freely, with the result that few can be squeezed into an 18-inch circumference.

Uplift brassieres, which came into fashion as recently as the 1930's, make the average American girl's bust measurement one inch bigger than it was 30 years ago, the survey says.

"American women have the best figures in the world," the survey said. "The French average figure is too straight-hipped, and the average British woman is an inch bigger on all measurements."

The New Foundation Garments Predict Season's Styles

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY

United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—The shape of things to come is still a secret in the fashion world, but not in the realistic end of the business that shapes figures.

Look at enough new foundation garments and you can predict what you'll look like in your clothes next season. You'll know whether to plan for a big success in the middle, a snug fit in the derriere or an accent on front curves.

Velma Cox is predicting the emphasis on curves above the waist. She paused for an interview in the midst of a two-week session of girdle and bra buying.

"Never so much attention on brassieres as this year," said the buyer for a Buffalo, N. Y., department store. "Women are more brassiere-conscious than girdle-conscious today. And the new clothes will make them even more so."

Seems what the sweater girl days and Jane Russell didn't do to develop bustling consciousness a fellow named Christian Dior did. Dior showed his tulip look in Paris last fall and added a few inches to the width of his dresses on top. There were a few chuckles at the time, but without giving away any secrets, it is safe to say there will be a lot of imitators this fall.

Hence the brassiere build-up. "You may think it sounds like an attempt at being funny," Miss Cox said, "but the bra business has built up in two ways to astonishing levels. The number sold has increased tremendously and the number of women who wear padded bras goes up every year."

She recalled, without a trace of nostalgia, the days when a woman had two girdles and two bras at the most, one set for everyday and one for wearing under Sunday outfits.

"Now they not only buy different foundation garments for different dresses, but they match color, length, style of girdles and bras," she said.

"What brings us back to the forecast. A long-line brassiere that reaches to the top of the girdle is the biggest thing for fall," said Miss Cox. This indicates a lot of snug-fitting midriffs in fall dresses.

Long girdles, to give a smooth, hipless line, are on the increase too, so the sheath dresses here to stay for another season.

Luncheon Is Held In Compliment To Juanita Williams

Miss Juanita Williams, bride-elect of Robert Edward Sparks, was complimented at a luncheon last Tuesday at one o'clock at the home of Mrs. Grady Miller, 700 Poplar Street. Mrs. Milton Ecker was the hostess.

The honoree wore for the special pre-nuptial event a toast aqua cotton frock with brown accessories. Her hostess' gift corsage was of yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. P. D. Williams, mother of the honoree, was presented a corsage of white carnations.

Miss Williams was the recipient of a beautiful coffee server from the hostess.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion with arrangements of sweet peas and lilies placed at vantage points throughout.

Following a delicious luncheon the group enjoyed playing games.

Perfume Problem Answered

Q.—Dear Penny: I love the idea of stick perfume—but it is so messy to handle. The foil tears, the stick melts, shrinks and quite often breaks when used. Do you know of a stick perfume that's convenient and practical to use?—Mrs. R. V. C.

A.—Yes! One outstanding performer has just created a wonderful stick perfume that works like a lipstick. Just "twirl" the case and apply! No foil to bother with—no melting—no shrinking—no breaking—no messiness! You'll want to tuck it in your purse and take it with you everywhere you go! Just ask for: Houbigant Chantilly SWIV-ELSTICK. $1.50 plus tax at Scott-Walgreen Drugs.

Lake Erie Lighthouse Will Become Museum

FAIRPORT HARBOR, Ohio (UP)—The venerable lighthouse here built in 1829 and used for 100 years, will be turned into a museum.

The stone edifice, built by Jonathan Goldsmith, was acquired by the Fairport Harbor Historical Society after several years of negotiations with the U. S. government.

Through it was replaced as a beacon for Great Lakes shipping in 1925 and a new light constructed nearby, it wasn't declared surplus by the Coast Guard until 1950 and was only recently disposed of by the General Services Administration.

The society plans to maintain the light house as a museum, in addition to the old keeper's house which adjoins it and has been utilized for years as a repository of Great Lakes lore.
